

LOIS LOWRY will read from her 31st book, a young adult novel titled Gossamer, which explores the world of dreams. She has received two Newbery Medals, one for The Giver, “a powerful and provocative novel” (The New York Times) about a utopia gone wrong, and the other for Number the Stars, a fictionalized account of how Denmark saved the Jews from the Nazis. Her other books include the popular Anastasia Krupnik series. She has received countless honors and divides her time between Cambridge and a 237-year-old farmhouse in Maine.

A Family LITERARY EVENT!

ANDREA WHITE is the author of Surviving Antarctica: Reality TV 2083, which, like The Giver, is set in the future. Booklist called it “a real page-turner,” which “will give readers pause as they ponder the ethics of teens risking their lives in adult-contrived situations for the entertainment of the masses.” She has had several short stories published; this is her first book. Besides working as a writer, White is an attorney, community volunteer, and education activist. She is married to Bill White, Mayor of Houston.
